

A System In Crisis: More ERs Shut; Losses Grow

In January 2001, the California Medical Association issued its first report detailing losses in California's emergency system. Since then losses have continued to escalate, more emergency rooms have shut down, and patients face longer and longer waits. During the 1999 fiscal year hospitals reported losses of $316,576,503. In FY 2000, losses increased more than $8 million to $324,699,115. Emergency rooms reporting losses increased from 285 to 289, not including those that shut completely.

THREE-YEAR HISTORICAL COMPARISON OF CALIFORNIA HOSPITALS WITH EMERGENCY ROOM FINANCIAL LOSSES REPORTED (1997-2000)

Since 1999 ten more emergency rooms have closed bringing the total number of closures to 19 in the last three years and 60 in the last decade. The rapid decline in the number of hospitals has increased the strain for those that remain, led to longer waits, and left entire communities without a nearby emergency room. Many hospitals are faced with escalating losses as more patients seek care in their emergency rooms. The losses create a financial strain on the hospital often forcing the closure of the entire facility.

ER Closures Since 1999:

- Pacifica Hospital – Orange County
- Santa Ana Hospital Medical Center – Orange County
- Valley Community Hospital – Santa Barbara County
- Lindsay Hospital – Tulare County
- Mercy American River Hospital – Sacramento County
- Sharp Cabrillo Hospital – San Diego County
- Mission Bay Hospital – San Diego County
- Scripps East County Hospital – San Diego County
- Mt. Zion Hospital – San Francisco
- Doctors Hospital - Pinole

Number of Emergency Rooms in California

Emergency room visits increased to nearly 9.5 million, a two percent increase from the prior year. This additional volume of patients must be cared for by fewer hospitals and that means increased workloads for the physicians and nurses at remaining emergency rooms. Increasing patient volume and a decline in the number of emergency rooms, has made multiple hour waits for emergency care the norm.

The emergency medicine system continues to deteriorate leaving the state unprepared to deal with a serious flu epidemic, major catastrophe or a terrorist attack. Emergency rooms are our first line of defense and the EMS system in California needs to be stabilized and revitalized to ensure immediate care is available in a serious catastrophe. Recent increases in ambulance diversion (the practice of sending an ambulance to another hospital because the nearest one is full) and patient waiting times, reveal that the system would grind to a halt in a major catastrophe. The current crisis must be addressed because each year of inaction brings us a step closer to a meltdown of our emergency medical system.
